7.3 Institutional Distinctiveness

The word "institutional distinctiveness" describes the special traits and attributes that set one educational institution apart from another in terms of its academic offerings, support services, mission, vision, and values. At RIET, we define uniqueness as "DOING SAME THINGS; DIFFERENTLY."

The Institute places a strong emphasis on students' overall development and offers them all the tools and resources necessary to support it. One of the Institute's most notable characteristics is this; a quick description is provided below. The NAAC places a strong emphasis on educational quality. Therefore, the institute's student-centered activities are intended to support students' overall growth.

RAJAMAHENDRI INSTITUTE OF ENGINEERING & TECHNOLOGY has a dream to prompt higher planes of advancing by granting specialized training with global norms, applied research, innovative capacity, esteem based guidance and to arise as a head establishment. The establishment expects to make a stage for comprehensive development and outcome of understudies at all levels. The Foundation's way of thinking of Variety, Incorporation, and Joining has gotten a lot of consideration and need.
